How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

For the trailing 12 months, the Westwood Alternative Income Fund outperformed its benchmark (FTSE 1-Month Treasury Bill) by several hundred basis points.

In the portfolio, both our Convertible Arbitrage and Yield allocations posted positive net returns for the period. Performance was driven by exposure to equity price movements and volatility as the convertible arbitrage sleeve benefited from lower interest rates, tight credit spreads, increased volatility and the outperformance of small-midcaps.

The prospect of interest rate cuts improved the market's mood to take additional risk. Small- and mid-cap growth equities (most associated with convertibles) had strong absolute performance as the rate-cutting cycle began. The future cost of capital is declining and thus lowering the cost of funds to fuel capital-intensive growth stories.

In terms of positioning, net equity delta was increased in anticipation of Fed rate cuts. Small-cap equity performance is sensitive to changes in interest rates as the companies typically need more capital to fund their growth and expand their businesses. We feel that taking the additional equity risk is warranted in light of the Fed's latest move and potential future reductions in rates. Our yield bucket allocation remains at below 20% both as a function of tighter credit spreads and its potential for lower risk-adjusted forward-looking returns relative to convertible arbitrage. We may experience some turbulent waters in the near term as each economic data point is released, but the Fund, as a long volatility strategy, is positioned to capitalize on this uncertainty.
