How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

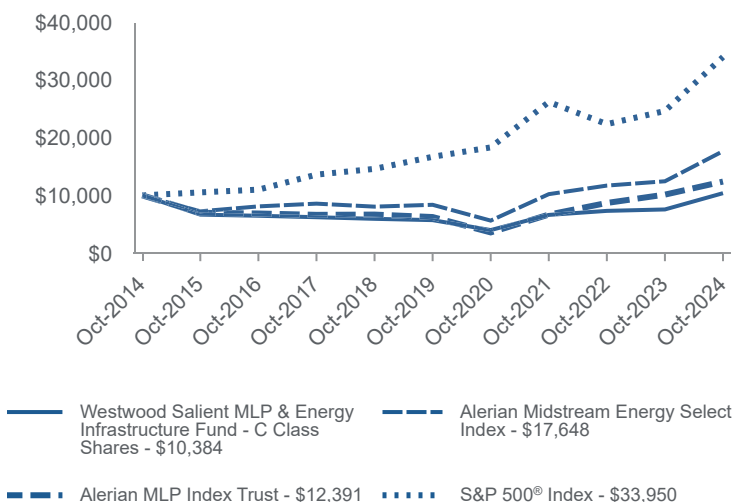

For the trailing twelve months, the Westwood Salient MLP and Energy Infrastructure Fund modestly trailed its representative benchmark (Alerian Midstream Energy Select TR Index) during the period despite posting a strong absolute return of nearly 40%.

During the period, the best performing sector on an absolute basis was Natural Gas Pipelines, which significantly contributed to fund performance as the sub-sector returned over 60% for the period due to rising U.S. power demand linked to AI data centers. The Fund's limited exposure to Renewable Energy negatively impacted performance, as the sector struggled with challenges such as rising interest rates, inflation, supply chain disruptions, and uncertainties about the industry's future in light of the upcoming US Presidential Election.

On a relative basis, allocation was the main driver of underperformance during the period versus the benchmark. While allocation effects detracted, the Fund's stock selection generated almost 300bps of positive attribution. We continue to believe that U.S. production growth in coming years will fill existing pipeline capacity and provide incremental cash flow growth to midstream businesses, which will be returned to shareholders via larger distributions and potential stock buybacks.
