How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

During the fiscal year, the Fund underperformed the S&P 500 Index, which posted an impressive gain of nearly 40%. These robust results reflected strong economic conditions, characterized by easing inflation and steady employment figures. However, market gains were concentrated, driven by the "Magnificent 7" — high-performing, large-cap growth stocks in the tech sector — which soared on optimism about AI-related opportunities. In contrast, small-cap and mid-cap stocks significantly lagged, while value stocks also underperformed their growth counterparts.

This environment is crucial in evaluating fund performance, as the Fund traditionally faces challenges during sustained market uptrends. Throughout the period, the S&P 500 experienced only three notable declines of over 4%, all of which the Fund largely avoided:

- Between March 28 and April 19, the S&P 500 fell -5.40%, while the Tactical Plus Class F shares declined just -1.20%, capturing only 22% of the market downside.
- From July 16 to August 5, 2024, the S&P 500 shed -8.45%; Tactical Plus Class F shares declined -3.72%, capturing 44% of the market downside.
- From August 30 to September 6, the S&P 500 lost -4.22%, while the Tactical Plus Class F shares fell -2.51%, capturing only 59% of the market downside.

The Fund's four-pillar investment process informed its positioning. Due to high valuations, overly bullish sentiment, tight monetary conditions and positive market momentum, we limited market exposure during the period to between 40% and 70%. At the end of the period, valuations remained elevated, above their historical highs, while monetary factors were neutral following a rise in interest rates in October (despite the Federal Reserve's interest rate cut). Investor sentiment had become less optimistic (a positive from our contrarian perspective), and market momentum stayed strong.
