How did the Fund perform during the reporting period?

The Westwood Broadmark Tactical Plus Fund underperformed its representative benchmark, the HFRX Equity Hedge Index, in the reporting period. Equity markets experienced increased volatility from geopolitical risks and equity-market shocks, while earnings strength among artificial intelligence-linked mega-cap technology firms remained a key area of support for equities, especially in the U.S. market. An increase in market breadth that began in late 2025 continued throughout early 2026, as value stocks, small caps and non-U.S. equities experienced periodic leadership as investors sought broader participation and downside resilience.

Through January 2026, exposure to the market was increased as the Investment team added positions in response to improving relative strength. Exposure was reduced as monetary policy, momentum and market breadth deteriorated in the middle of the period. The team increased exposure in April as momentum, market breadth, sentiment and volume showed improvement. Relative to the Tactical Growth Fund, the Tactical Plus Fund maintained higher exposure to the market throughout the period.

With regard to our four-pillar investment process, for much of the period, the valuation pillar pointed to equity valuations being elevated compared to historical norms, as stock market capitalization as a percentage of gross domestic product reached new all-time highs. Monetary factors and credit conditions remained positive before turning neutral to end the period as conflict in the Middle East sent commodity prices upward.

The investor sentiment pillar was negative for most of the period, turning positive during March from our contrarian point of view. The momentum pillar was more dynamic, remaining positive but deteriorating until March, when it turned negative, and rebounding to positive territory in April.

The team would increase exposure if interest rates declined and if momentum improved further. The team would decrease exposure if our breadth and volume momentum models deteriorated.
